Burion Launches to Drive Innovation and Indigenous Participation in Construction and Maintenance Nationwide

June 2026 – Pacific Services Group Holdings (PSG Holdings) has officially been renamed Burion, marking a significant new chapter focused on innovation, growth and Indigenous participation across Australia in the commercial construction and maintenance sectors.

An exciting step forward for the business as it continues to grow. Burion will be focusing in its national expansion across Australia meeting the growing demands of both the construction and maintenance sectors. The rebrand marks a significant new chapter focused on innovation, growth and Indigenous participation across Australia in the commercial construction and maintenance sectors.

Mr Hayden Charles, proud Indigenous community leader from Wiradjuri Country and Managing Director of Burion said, “The rebrand positions Burion as a forward-thinking leader in the industry and marks an important milestone for our business and Indigenous participation in construction and maintenance across Australia. Burion will represent an evolution to deliver projects that incorporate sustainability, technology and other futureproofing practices. We remain dedicated to creating opportunities for the Indigenous community, the rebrand reflects a significant step forward in leading the industry.”

Mr Tomi Vasilevsk, who brings 30 years of experience in the major infrastructure sector to his role as the Executive Director at Burion and will lead the construction and maintenance teams to deliver high quality projects across the country. Vasilevski has significant experience in the construction, operations and maintenance of multi-billion-dollar infrastructure assets including roads, rail, bridges, buildings and facilities, cycleways, motorways, traffic signalling and more.

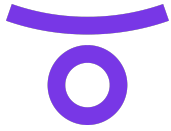

Vasilevski said, “Joining Burion at this transformative stage is an exciting opportunity. The rebrand is more than a name change - it reflects our commitment to raise standards, lead the industry forward and create meaningful opportunities for Indigenous talent across Australia. At Burion, we will combine deep industry experience with innovative approaches to deliver complex and forward-thinking construction and maintenance projects.”

With Burion now firmly established, the Company is well positioned to meet the growing demands of the construction and maintenance sectors. The rebrand reflects a commitment to deliver quality, innovation and collaboration, while continuing to engage and empower Indigenous workers. As Burion grows, it aims to set a new benchmark for the industry – to deliver projects with purpose, precision and long-term impact for communities nationwide.
